

A Prayer For Your Marriage

Here is a scriptural prayer for marriage that you can use.

Father, thank You for my marriage and for my spouse. I choose to value and honor my spouse. I give my marriage to You. Help me make it into the marriage that You want it to be.

Help me better understand and honor the marriage covenant. Help me understand and walk more and more in Your love in every area, and especially in my marriage.

I declare that my relationship with my spouse is my primary relationship on this earth, second only to my relationship with You. I will prefer my relationship with my spouse above my relationship with my parents, siblings, children, and friends.

I will not be self-centered in my marriage, but through love I will serve my spouse. I will seek to meet their needs, wants, and desires, while trusting You to take care of my own. I will seek to know my spouse more and more so that I can love them more perfectly, and so that I can be the best mate for them that I can be.

I will be quick to listen, slow to speak, and slow to get angry. I will forgive my spouse quickly when needed, and when I offend them I will quickly repent and ask their forgiveness.

I will seek to serve their best interests in my actions and decisions. I will be faithful to my spouse whether I am with them or not. I will be faithful with my body, my eyes, my ears, and my mind. I will take captive any thought, and not speak any word, that would bring division and death into our relationship.

I will guard this relationship, and there will be unity in our relationship, and I thank You that You will command the blessing on our household. We are one, we are indivisible, and we will put to flight any opposition that would try to divide us, and we will have victory over the world and over the evil one.

In Jesus name, Amen!
